LITIR: A New Computer Application in the Humanities

For quite a few years now, electronic data processing has become more and more familiar to scholars in the humanities. Computers have been used in linguistic research, archaeology, Biblical studies, and in textual and musical analysis. It has been recognized also that computerized systems for the storage and retrieval of information can be used very profitably in the humanities in a host of different ways. In 1977, for example, the Modern Language Association of America began to use the computer as a "text processor" in the production of its annual international bibliography.

The MLA's innovation in the production of bibliographies was subsequently enhanced by the Lockheed Information Division, based in California, which converted the system into what is known among EDP professionals and users as an "on-line database." The Lockheed development, however, exhibited certain shortcomings. As the database was not designed, in the first instance, as a "search" database, information retrieval was not as easy or as successful as it might have been. It was at this point that the ingenuity of a sessional lecturer in the Department of English became stimulated. Brahma Chaudhuri has designed and developed a database capable of handling a wide variety of information retrieval projects undertaken by individual researchers in different areas of the humanities.

LITIR, Literary Information

and Retrieval, is, according to Mr. Chaudhuri, the first database developed to provide literary scholars searching facilities of the type long available to researchers in the sciences and social sciences. Inaugurated ("signed on") by President Horowitz at a ceremony in the Faculty Club this past Tuesday, 17 February, the system (a private subfile of SPIRES) has already sparked wide interest, with requests coming from the United States, Europe and Australasia for on-line testing.

The system's first project is a mammoth one, an international survey of everything published about Victorian England from 1830 to 1914. The first stage of this project was realized on Tuesday at the "sign on" ceremony with the release of the first Annual Bibliography of Victorian Studies.

The bibliography is a hard copy version of what is available to researchers on-line. With this first publication and file, researchers may gain easy access to a mass of titles that appeared on Victorian England in 1977. Volumes covering 1978 and 1979 will appear in the next few months and a five-year cumulative bibliography covering the years 1976 to 1980 will be released by the end of 1981.

The topics covered in the bibliography have wide appeal. Philosophy, religion, the arts and sciences, technology, language and literature are all there. Thus, the impact LITIR will have on Victorian scholars will be great. For all those interested in the system,

Mr. Chaudhuri will present a public seminar on 4 March in L-3 Humanities Centre. □ development. Speakers will include a pediatrician, professors from the Departments of Special Education, Reading, Physical Education, and Speech, and a representative from Edmonton Public Schools.

This course is not designed for University credit, but a certificate will be issued based on consistent attendance.

Fee will be $20 per person, or $35 per couple. The lectures will be given in 128 Education Building South. For more information, please call Barbara at 432-4439. □

Alberta/Western Interchange

The political scene in Ontario is very much within the ken of political science students at The University of Alberta. However to get a firm handle on it, it's advisable to journey there and breathe it in and rub up against it. Likewise, Alberta's political moves are noted and studied by political science students at the University of Western Ontario in London. Thus it happened that the respective Departments of Political Science, in cooperation with the Canadian Bureau for International Education, hit upon an exchange program. Nineteen students from Alberta will spend the week of 20 to 27 February at Western and seventeen students from Western will reciprocate 5 to 13 May.

According to the program description, the exchange will focus on provincial politics within the discipline of political science. It will serve to supplement existing course offerings in Canadian Politics generally and provincial politics specifically, with academically oriented exposure to the actual concerns of provincial governments.

The Western Ontario students will receive briefings and lectures concerning the Alberta and western provincial positions on current issues of Canadian politics. The Alberta students will similarly be exposed to the Ontario position.

The departments feel that, given the level of interest and concern regarding the national energy policy and the constitutional debate, an exchange of ideas in an academic setting cannot but be beneficial to both groups of students.

The schedule of events prepared for the Alberta delegation contains the following daily themes: "The Political Culture of Ontario," (includes discussion of the evolution of the Ontario Party System, 1867-1945 and discussion of the Robarts era in Ontario); "Ontario in the Nuclear Age" (includes a tour of the Pickering Nuclear Generating Plant); "The Government and Politics of Ontario" (includes briefings by officials of the Ontario Department of Intergovernmental Affairs and a meeting with representatives of the Ontario Press Gallery); "Labour in Ontario" (includes a session with the Ontario Federation of Labour); "Energy and Resources in Ontario" (includes a discussion of Ontario and the new energy wealth of the Canadian west); "Business in Ontario" (with a tour of the Ford Oakville Assembly Plant); and "Ontario in the 1980s" (features discussions on the future of urban government in Ontario and the future shape of Ontario politics). There will also be a number of social functions.

G. Pyrcz, Department of Political Science, University of Alberta, will accompany the students who were selected in terms of not only their interest in the exchange but because of prior courses in political science, history and economics that form an academic background suitable to the venture.

The May program is still being shaped but will include briefings with Government of Alberta officials in the Departments of Energy and Natural Resources and Federal and Intergovernmental Affairs, and with the Mayor of Edmonton's office. Visits will be scheduled to the tar sands installations at Fort McMurray and to other resource facilities in Alberta. □

Zemrau Appointed Universiade '83 President

At a news conference held on Friday, 30 January, at the Edmonton Plaza Hotel, Ed Zemrau, Chairman of the University's Department of Athletic Services, was named President of the World University Games' Universiade '83 Edmonton Corporation. With the appointment comes ultimate responsibility for the success of the games in 1983 and their attendant cultural exposition.

July 1983. The athletes who will compete in the nine compulsory and one optional sports will undoubtedly be among the best in the world. In 1977, for example, the Cuban Alberto Juanterano set a new world record at the games in Sophia, Bulgaria. Even more telling, perhaps, is the fact that twenty-six of the Russian gold medallists in the Moscow Olympics and six of the eight Italian medallists had competed in earlier World University Games.

Mr. Zemrau was born and raised in Edmonton, is married and has four children. A graduate in Business Administration from Denver University, he is well known for his involvement in local as well as national and international sports. In addressing the news media on 30 January, he referred to the legacy of the XI Commonwealth Games and to the challenge which all of us, as citizens of Edmonton, must face in preparing for Universiade '83. He believes, however, that with an organizational structure based on volunteer assistance, so successful in 1978, the challenge will be met and "we will show Canada and the world what excellent hosts we are." □

Mr. Zemrau, however, is not daunted by the fact that the games, which take place every two years, are second in size only to the Olympics (3,500 athletes from some eighty-five countries are expected to take part). Rather, Mr. Zemrau is "thrilled," even though as Executive Committee Member of the Fédération internationale du sport universitaire and former President of the Canadian Inter-university Athletic Union, he is well aware of the massive hard work ahead of him.

The World University Games will take place from 1 to 12

University Funding and the Federal Government – the AUCC Response

In the 29 January 1981 issue of Folio, there was an article related to the possible reduction in federal cash transfers to the provinces ("Cash Transfers to be slashed by $1.5 Billion? CAUT Protests"). The short article was accompanied by a letter to the Prime Minister from Israel Unger, CAUT President. The matter is of some moment, despite vague assurances that the issue is not quite as serious as it sounds. The Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada is also perturbed by the threat of changes in the financing of tertiary education. What follows here is a submission prepared by the AUCC and delivered to the Prime Minister's office last month.

A Brief on the Financing of Canadian Universities

Through the Established Programs Financing (EPF) arrangements, the federal and provincial governments jointly provide Canadian universities with the major portion of their operating incomes. This joint funding is a recognition of the interest and the concerns that both levels of government have in the maintenance of a strong and vibrant university sector. The university community strongly urges the federal government to continue its involvement in university funding in the interests of the whole of Canadian society.

Canadian universities are vital to the social, cultural and economic development of the country as a whole. They provide essential services to the community and to the provinces in which they are located and they also have important Canada-wide and international responsibilities. Universities are dedicated to teaching and research, fostering critical awareness, imparting professional skills, providing a pool of expertise and specialized competence to society, arousing intellectual curiosity and setting the standards for meticulous inquiry. The institutions are also a major provider of high-level training and retraining. A society which lacks ample numbers of university graduates will find itself in a precarious position, economically and culturally. Furthermore, at a time when Canada's international technological and economic competitiveness depends upon an expanded research effort, the research activities of the universities are essential to such a development. In short, universities are much more than educational institutions; they form an integral part of our social and cultural fabric.

Since 1977, a major mechanism in the support of post-secondary education in Canada has been provided through the Established Programs Financing Act. The importance of this program to the universities is indicated by the fact that the total transfer to the provinces for post-secondary education, including tax points and cash transfers, amounted to $2.775 billion in 1979-80, a year in which the total operating income for the universities was $3.15 billion.

The universities recognize that the EPF arrangements may not be the best vehicle by which our governments can provide financial support for Canadian universities and that changes will have to be considered. Indeed, when these arrangements were introduced, the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada pointed out some of the attendant difficulties which subsequently have been demonstrated in the operation of the program. The cash transfers are tied to increases in the GNP and may have no relation to the level of provincial support to the universities. As a result, the federal government has been contributing an ever increasing share of the costs of post-secondary education for which it receives little or no public recognition. In addition, the current

EPF arrangements do not necessarily ensure that country-wide interests in higher education are served because the provinces are free to reduce their share of university support regardless of the potential impact on the overall needs of the country. Indeed, the cash transfers and the yielding of tax points under EPF to the provinces in support of higher education have come to be regarded by the provinces as general revenue which may be used in support of any program.

Notwithstanding the desirability of making some modifications to the present arrangements, however, the universities of Canada are concerned about the possibility of precipitous changes to EPF that might have a serious impact upon their financial support. The universities are very concerned about any abrupt federal withdrawal from, or significant reduction in, the present level of support for universities under EPF.

Any such action could have serious and possibly disastrous effects on universities already weakened by a decade during which provincial operating grant increases have lagged behind inflation. Further erosion of the operating base would inevitably reduce the capacity of Canada's universities to meet country-wide and provincial needs in high level manpower and research.

Before any major changes are made to the EPF arrangements, a thorough re-examination of the system of financing Canadian universities is required. Such a re-examination should involve consultation with the universities in order to determine the effects on both Canada-wide and provincial goals.

Recommendations

In light of the above, the AUCC recommends that:

1) the federal government recognize that its cash transfers under

EPF provide an essential underpinning of university financing in Canada and that it is important, therefore, that any changes in EPF that may be developed with the provinces ensure the continued financial viability and effectiveness of Canadian universities in meeting both provincial and Canada-wide needs;

2) the federal government respect the commitment, made by Prime Minister Trudeau in 1976 when he announced the EPF program, not to amend the EPF arrangements without giving three years' notice of any such intention;

3) the on-going discussions relative to EPF make provision for the following:

- a) an examination of federal and provincial expectations and obligations relative to the role of universities in our society;
- b) a review of current financing of Canadian universities in terms of level and sources of funds;
- c) appropriate university participation;
- d) the resulting recommendations be made available to all parties concerned no later than 31 December 1981. □

General Faculties Council

General Faculties Council held its latest meeting on Monday, 9 February. The following is a brief synopsis of some of the decisions taken:

■ Among the several GFC Standing Committees under consideration for removal to the authority of appropriate Vice-Presidents, one, the Parking Appeals Committee was placed under the authority of the Vice-President (Facilities and Services). Proposals relating to the Housing and Food Services Advisory Committee and the Conference Funds Committee were tabled and that concerning the Computer Facilities Committee was referred to the GFC Executive.

- Amendments were made to the Code of Student Behavior to diminish possible conflict with the Criminal Code of Canada.
- The work of the President's Advisory Committee on Testing and Remediation was strongly endorsed by GFC. The program, under the direction of Larry McKill from the Department of English, will continue in the coming session.
- A proposal emanating from the Faculty of Arts concerning baccalaureate degrees "with distinction" was accepted after some debate. □

Misnomer

In last week's Folio it was reported that one of the two Graduate Students' Association representatives at the most recent meeting of Senate was Peter Nelson. The man's name, in fact, is Peter Malcolm. □

The Office of Community Relations conducts a Speakers' Bureau which will provide speakers to community groups and organizations. A volunteer service, the bureau hosts over 300 University personnel who are willing to address groups on topics as wide ranging as the disciplines they encompass. Subjects of the day such as inflation, nutrition and how television affects children to out of the ordinary, metaglossotherapy and laser beams, are just a small sampling of the topics which can be addressed. Should you require a speaker, or more information, contact Sandra Halme in Community Relations, 432-2325.

Alma Mater Funds Available
The University's Alma Mater Fund now has money available to assist groups on campus engaged in worthwhile projects. The Fund is the vehicle through which our alumni make annual contributions to the University. These gifts are made with the understanding that they are to be used to assist projects which can give an added dimension to University activities.

In order to be eligible for support from the Alma Mater Fund, a project should have a strong student and student/community orientation, and not be of a type normally funded from general University operating or research funds. The Alma Mater Fund is not intended to finance salary expenses, and proposed projects should not be designed to advance the academic careers of individual students.

Grants will not be made for the support of existing publications, and they are normally made to a project only once. Organizers of continuing projects should not expect annual support from the Fund.

Application forms are available from the Office of Community Relations, 423 Athabasca Hall, and must be submitted by 27 February 1981. For further information, please contact Theresa Papirnik, Secretary to the Alma Mater Fund Allocations Committee, telephone 432-2325.
